Contemporary Issues of Pakistan

Pakistan’s Foreign Policy

- Foreign policy is the mechanism national governments use to guide their diplomatic interactions and relationships with other countries. A state's foreign policy reflects its values and goals, and helps drive its political and economic aims in the global ground. The main objective of foreign policy is to use diplomacy — or talking, meeting, and making agreements — to solve international problems. They try to keep problems from developing into conflicts that require military settlements. The President almost always has the primary responsibility for shaping foreign policy.

Foreign Policy of Pakistan and Challenges

- The foreign policy of Pakistan seeks to promote the internationally recognized norms of interstate relations, i.e. respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of all States, non-interference in the internal affairs of other States; not forceful and peaceful settlement of disputes.
- The Foreign Minister of Pakistan is the official charged with state-to-state diplomacy, although the Prime minister maintains ultimate authority over foreign policy. The state's foreign policy includes defining the national interest, as well as the economic interest and strategies chosen both to safeguard that and to achieve its policy goals.

Security Challenges

- Pakistan has to pursue its diplomatic goals in an unsettled global and regional environment marked by several key features. They include rising East-West tensions, increasing preoccupation of big powers with domestic challenges, ongoing trade and technology wars projecting the strategic competition between China and the US, a rules-based international order, and attempts by regional and other powers to reshape the rules of the game in their neighborhood.
- Managing relations with India will be a difficult challenge especially as the Modi government is continuing its repressive policy in occupied Kashmir and pressing ahead with demographic changes there, rejecting Pakistan's protests. The hope in establishment circles that last year's backchannel between the two countries would surrender a thaw(defrost) or even rapprochement, turned to disappointment when no headway was made on any front beyond the re-commitment by both neighbors to observe a ceasefire on the Line of Control.

Security Challenges

- In balancing secure with Saudi Arabia and Iran, Pakistan should consider how to leverage possible easing of tensions between the long-standing rivals — of which there are some temporary signs. With Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman keen to use economic power to expand his country's diplomatic slap by making strategic overseas investments, Pakistan should use its political secure with Riyadh to attract Saudi investment through a reasonable strategy. Relations with Iran too should be strengthened with close consultation on regional issues, especially Afghanistan. The recent exchange agreement is a step in the right direction.

Pakistan Relation with neighboring countries

- Pakistan maintains a tense relationship with India due to the Kashmir conflict, close ties with the People's Republic of China, Turkey, Saudi Arabia, and Gulf Arab states, and fluctuating relationship with the United States of America due to overlapping interests during the Cold War and War on Terror.
- Pakistan has had a long and good relationship with China. Pakistan has an interest in the Persian Gulf and has wide-ranging two sided relations with the United States and other Western countries. Pakistan distrusted the Soviet Union during much of the Cold War.
- Pakistan is bordered by 4 important countries on all sides. • China in the north. • India in the northeast. • Iran in the West. • Afghanistan in the northwest.

Pakistan Relation with neighboring countries

- Our presentation aims to summarize our economic and social relations with these four countries. Importance of geo-strategic position and socio-economic exchange Pakistan and its Neighboring Countries.
- PEOPLES REPUBLIC OF CHINA Pakistan's Socioeconomic Relations with China. Relations with China began in 1950 when Pakistan became the first Muslim country to accept the People's Republic of China as an Independent state. • Both countries have exchanged tours on a high level and have made agreements on many issues. • China provides Pakistan with economic, military, and technical assistance. • China is assisting in improving Pakistan's Nuclear power sector and in the establishment of a seaport in Gwadar. • China supports Pakistan on Kashmir Issue while Pakistan supports China on Tibet, Xinjiang, and Taiwan.
- 1. The REPUBLIC OF INDIA Socio-economic Relations with India.

Pakistan Relation with neighboring countries

- Ever since Independence and the breakup of the sub-continent, Pakistan and India have had less than cordial relations. • The wars which took place in 1948, 1965, and 1971 further added to the hostility between the two nations. • Kashmir issue remains a thorn in relations. • Now 'battles' between India and Pakistan are fought on the cricket pitch, showing that hostility remains in the hearts of the nation. • Economic relations are strained due to this historical hostility although the cultural similarities cannot be denied.

- ISLAMIC REPUBLIC OF IRAN Socio-economic relations with Iran • Iran was the first to extend recognition to the new State. • It established diplomatic relations with Pakistan in May 1948. • Iran-Pakistan.

Determinants of Foreign Policy

- In the modern world, no single state can survive on its own. Each state is bound by affiliation. That's why every state has to dream of good relations with other states. As a member of the international society, the relations of the states are determined and controlled by foreign policy. Several things also determine foreign policy and those things are called determinants of foreign policy.
  - 1. Geographical Location
  - 2. Population
  - 3. History
  - 4. Economic Resources
  - 5. Ideology
  - 6. Efficiency of Government and Nature of Political Leadership
- 7. Quality of Diplomacy

National interest

- The national interest is a sovereign state's goals and ambitions (economic, military, cultural, or otherwise), taken to be the aim of government. And long-term stability of a country's political system and economic life, territorial honest, political independence, economic independence and the continuation of the political system.

- Kinds of National Interest
- Primary interest.
- Secondary interest.
- Permanent interest.
- Variable interest.
- General interest.
- Specific interest.

National interest

- The political and strategic philosophers had classified national interest into diverse categories. The primary interests of a nation are the protection of physical boundary, political system and cultural identity of the state against possible encroachments from outside powerful state. These interests are permanent and the state must guard them at all costs.

UN (United Nation) declaration of Human Rights

- Those 30 articles currently known as 30 universal declaration of human rights or 30 basic human rights, including rights to life, rights to education, rights to organize and rights to treated fair among others things. The 30 universal human rights also cover up freedom of opinion, expression, thought and religion. It declares that human rights are universal – to be enjoyed by all people, no matter who they are or where they live. The Universal Declaration includes civil and political rights, like the right to life, liberty, free speech and privacy.
- The rights covered by the contract
- Freedom from discrimination.
- Right to equality between men and women.
- Right to life.
- Freedom from torture.
- Freedom from slavery.
- Right to liberty and security of person.
- Right to be treated with humanity in detention.
- Freedom of movement. And freedom of association; participation in public affairs and elections

Non-Governmental organizations (NGO'S)

- Non-governmental organizations, or NGOs, were first called such in Article 71 in the Charter of the newly formed United Nations in 1945. While NGOs have no fixed or formal definition, they are generally defined as nonprofit entities independent of governmental influence (although they may receive government funding). Non-Governmental Organization (NGO) is non-profit, voluntary citizens' group which is organized on a local, national or international level, task-oriented and driven by people with a common interest,

- These perform a variety of services and humanitarian functions, bring citizens' concerns to Governments. NGO activities include, but are not limited to, environmental, social, advocacy and human rights work. They can work to promote social or political change on a broad scale or very locally. NGOs play a critical part in developing society, improving communities, and promoting citizen participation.

Media and Social Change

- It is a message created by a person or a group of people sent through a transmitting device (a medium) to a large audience or market. Mass media is communication that reaches and influences a large number of people. Media to Inform Information is most important function the power of mass media to inform is almost acceptable. People read newspaper to know about what, when, where, who, why and How the things are happening pertaining to personalities or institutions. It brings about greater awareness among the bundle about men and materials. To educate the mass media educates people by giving information about food, health, housing, sanitation, employment, agriculture, industry, environment, science, technology, modernization etc. Radio is very useful source of information and education both in urban and rural areas in developing countries. The print media predominant source of education Ex: Newspaper, Journals etc. To Entertain Mass media also entertains people. Film, television, radio are increasingly subjected to commercialization via entertainment. Television is nation's number one entertainment medium. But film & radio are not far behind.

Social Stratification

- The three social classes – upper class, middle class, and lower class – as well as the upper stratum, middle stratum, and lower stratum are commonly used to define social stratification in Pakistan. Furthermore, kinship, family, tribe, caste, or all four of these might serve as the foundations of social class. The major systems of stratification are slavery, estate systems, caste systems, and class systems.

- Social stratification refers to a society's categorization of its people into rankings based on factors like wealth, income, education, family background, and power.
- Housing, social services, geographical location, and education are some of the most common social determinants of health. These factors have a significant impact on the current healthcare landscape.

Social mobility: possibilities and challenges

- Social mobility(strength) is particularly challenging for those in low-quality jobs, with limited chances to leave low-paid or temporary work.

- The current economic environment, the COVID-19 pandemic and ongoing megatrends(overall), such as digitalization and the green transformation, threaten equality of opportunity and social mobility for current and future generations.

- Education provides one of the most promising chances of upward social mobility and attaining a higher social status, regardless of current social standing. However, the stratification of social classes directly affects the educational opportunities and outcomes. In other words, social class and a family's socioeconomic status directly affect a child's chances for obtaining a quality education and succeeding in life. By age five, there are significant developmental differences between low, middle, and upper class children's intellectual and no cognitive(intellectual) skills.
